The History of Women, Men & Sexuality Group
UCLA Department of History
Presents a lunch workshop featuring

Jaimie D. Crumley
PhD Student, UCLA Department of Gender Studies

Freedom Feelings: Womanism, Black Feminism, and The Politics of Black Women’s Liberation

Maria W. Stewart (1803-1879)  Bethel AME Church c.1829

Friday, October 18, 2019
NOON
6275 Bunche Hall

Jaimie Crumley’s research explores black freedom in antebellum America as seen through the lives and writings of black Christian women. She focuses on women who taught and lectured in Boston, Philadelphia, New York, Washington, D.C. and England. These women provide insight into the role of Christian spirituality in shaping freedom for black women. Their histories underscore the complexities of race, gender, sexuality, and religiosity in antebellum United States. Her paper will be emailed a week in advance to members of the History of Women, Men, and Sexuality working group. To RSVP or be added to the listserv, please email Rebeca Martinez: rmartinez165@g.ucla.edu.