“New Perspectives on Rome as a Slave Society: Revisiting the Evidence from Herculaneum”

Henrik Mouritsen
Professor of Roman History
King’s College London
February 7 | 4PM | 6275 Bunche Hall

Henrik Mouritsen is a Professor of Roman History at King’s College London and works on Roman political and social history, especially republican politics, slavery, Pompeii, and Roman Italy. His books include Elections, Magistrates and Municipal Elite (1988), Italian Unification (1998), Plebs and Politics in the Roman Republic (2001), The Freedman in the Roman World (2011), and Politics in Roman Republic (2017).